

NEWS

ANU College of Law well represented at Australia's 2020 Summit

The ANU College of Law will be well represented at the upcoming 2020 Summit in Canberra. The Summit is a new initiative of the Australian Government to help shape the future of Australia, and will cover topics including the economy, infrastructure, environment, farming, health care, indigenous Australians, arts, national security, the system of government, and strengthening communities. A number of colleagues, students, alumni and Visiting Fellows have been chosen from thousands of applicants from all over Australia to brainstorm the future of the country at this event.

ANU College of Law participants will include: colleagues Kent Anderson, Hilary Charlesworth, Simon Rice and Amelia Simpson; students Susan Harris Rimmer, Jamila Rizvi, and Xian-Zhi Soon; Visiting Fellows Sir Anthony Mason and George Williams; and many ANU College of Law alumni.

The ANU College of Law congratulates these members of the College community on their success in being chosen, and in underlining the College's commitment to playing a leadership role in Australian public affairs.

For more information about the 2020 Summit, please visit the Commonwealth Government website at: <http://www.australia2020.gov.au/>

Pictured above: Professor Kent Anderson teaching a class in the ANU College of Law outdoor amphitheatre.