MORE ARC SUCCESS

ANU College of Law academic receives Australian Research Council grant

ANU College of Law has had more ARC success with the announcement that Dr Daniel Fitzpatrick has secured Future Fellowship funding for his project: 'The resilience of property: inundation, displacement and local relocation in the Asia-Pacific'.

Daniel's project summary states:

This project responds to increased risks of population movement as a result of natural disasters and climate change in the Asia-Pacific. The project analyses local relocations in Indonesia and Solomon Islands, in order to support sustainable resettlement of displaced persons in their home environments.

Daniel's success takes to four the number of ANU College of Law Future Fellows, adding to the achievements in previous funding rounds of Professor Tom Faunce, Professor Desmond Manderson and Associate Professor Matthew Rimmer.
