

Nicholas Tebbey awarded ACT Law Society's Young Lawyer Award 2009

ANU College of Law lecturer, Nicholas Tebbey, was presented with the 2009 ACT Law Society's Young Lawyer Award by Justice Richard Refshauge on 3 December.

According to a media release by the ACT Law Society, Nicholas was recognised for his 'contributions to the legal profession and to the Canberra Community' and was also recognised for his 'professional achievement'.

Nicholas completed his Bachelor of Laws with honours and Bachelor of Asian Studies at The Australian National University in 2005. He has worked with Snedden Hall & Gallop since July 2002, where as a Senior Associate he practises commercial & business law and migration law.

When Nicholas was admitted as a Migration Agent he achieved first place in the MAPKE exam which was the previous way to gain admission before the Graduate Certificate in Migration Law & Practice was introduced.

Nicholas has taught in the Migration Law and Practice Program at the ANU College of Law since its inception and has taught every course.

For information about the Graduate Certificate in Migration Law & Practice please see the website.