ANU COLLEGE
OF LAW

Welcome from the Dean

The Australian National University (ANU) is unique in Australia. Ranked 30th in the world by QS and based in the nation's capital city, the University attracts leading academics and outstanding students from Australia and around the world.

For more than 60 years, ANU College of Law has been the educational home to some of the most remarkable people from across the world: visionaries, influential leaders, researchers and individuals creating impact and social change nationally, regionally and globally.

This, coupled with our role as the national university, means we have a responsibility to be ambitious, bold and transformative in our approaches to teaching and learning. We are poised to provide the next generation of leaders and global citizens with the skills required for the challenges and careers of the future.

Our campus is located in the heart of the nation's capital, alongside foreign missions, the Australian Parliament, leading national institutions, research organisations and government departments. As Australia's national law school, our researchers have a unique relationship with the Commonwealth Government, providing expert advice to Australia's leaders and decision makers to ensure the advancement of the nation.

We are looking for people who find true joy in learning and following an idea to see where it will lead because it is exciting. We seek people with passion, who want to go beyond established boundaries and forge new paths to the future.

If you would like the opportunity to be extraordinary, then ANU will nurture you to achieve your potential.

I look forward to welcoming you to ANU in 2023.

World-class experts

At ANU you will be guided by some of the world's brightest minds, have access to world-class learning facilities and enjoy opportunities that are unique to studying law in the nation's capital — the city where laws and policies are made.

Associate Professor Wayne Morgan

Associate Dean (Education)

If you want to change the world, study law. If you want to learn at one of the world's leading law schools, join us at the ANU College of Law. Education with us gives you the knowledge, skills and ethical judgment to bring about change with creative solutions to the world's biggest policy and legal challenges. As teachers and researchers at the national law school, we bring together the inspiration and expertise to guide the leaders of tomorrow.

Wayne Morgan is an Associate Professor and the Associate Dean (Education) of the ANU College of Law. He is internationally recognised as a pioneer in the field of queer legal theory. He undertakes interdisciplinary research focused on social justice and law reform, which has contributed to a number of test cases before tribunals and courts at the national and international level, including cases before the Australian High Court and the UN Human Rights Committee.

Associate Professor Ntina Tzouvala

My teaching is based on the idea that only solid theorising can help us truly understand legal doctrine, but also that attention to the details, the 'boring' bits of the law, is the best way into the law's 'secrets'. I try to run an inclusive classroom and teach a wide range of materials both in terms of opinion and in terms of identities that have so far been marginalised in the study of the law.

Ntina Tzouvala is an Associate Professor and the Director of Postgraduate Programs at the ANU College of Law. Her research focuses on the political economy, history and theory of international law. She is currently working on a project on the political economy of war and international law. She is interested in legal pedagogy, especially how the law school curriculum can be reformed to achieve doctrinal rigour, theoretical pluralism and social equality.

Associate Professor Heather Roberts

At the ANU College of Law, students are walking distance from key institutions of government, including every level of the judiciary, and can see these institutions in operation. Our Visiting Judges Program also gives students the opportunity to interact with judges from across the country, each with different backgrounds and experiences. Students can learn first-hand what judges do, their journeys through the profession, and the skills the next generation of legal professionals need to flourish in their careers.

Heather Roberts is an Associate Professor at the ANU College of Law and the world's leading scholar on judicial swearing-in ceremonies. This research project is part of her larger research agenda in judicial studies, and is inspired by the question: how does who a judge is make a difference to how the law develops? Her work has been cited by judges and scholars in Australia and internationally, and she is the co-designer of the legal history wall at the Supreme Court of the Australian Capital Territory (ACT).

Associate Professor Anthony Hopkins

Many of our students come to law school because they care about social justice and they see the study of law as a foundation for making a difference. At ANU, we recognise, celebrate and foster this motivation. Our clinical and internship courses give students the opportunity to put their legal learning into action, experience the positive potential of law and develop highly sought-after, real-world legal skills.

Anthony Hopkins is an Associate Professor at the ANU College of Law and Special Magistrate of the ACT Magistrates Court. Dr Hopkins began his career as a criminal defence lawyer in Alice Springs at the Central Australian Aboriginal Legal Aid Service. He was called to the Bar in 2010 and continues to practise as a barrister with a focus on sentencing and appellate criminal cases.

What you can study

Whether you study law on its own or combine it with another discipline as part of an ANU flexible double degree, the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) will equip you with the legal knowledge and practical skills required for success in a diverse range of fields.

Single degree

Four years full-time or part-time equivalent

If you aspire to pursue a career in legal practice, then a single specialised qualification in law is your fast-track to becoming a lawyer.

Flexible double degree

Five years full-time or part-time equivalent

A flexible double degree will allow you to satisfy your curiosity and keep your career options open. This study option allows you to tailor your studies to qualify you for your dream job, or you can follow your head and your heart and combine a practical degree with another in a field you are passionate about.

Whatever approach you take, you'll graduate with two qualifications and a competitive edge in employability.

Benefits of a flexible double degree

- Study two Bachelor degrees at the same time and graduate with two qualifications
- Two qualifications provides a clear advantage when applying for jobs
- It takes less time than studying two undergraduate degrees separately
- You will have the same full-time workload as a student undertaking just one Bachelor degree

Combining your Bachelor of Laws (Honours) with one of 30 other ANU undergraduate degrees allows you to personalise your studies and broaden your career horizons.

Accounting	Design	Medical Science
Actuarial Studies	Economics	Music
Applied Data Analytics	Environment and Sustainability	Pacific Studies
Art History and Curatorship	Finance	Political Science
Arts	Genetics	Politics, Philosophy and Economics
Asian Studies	Information Technology	Public Policy

Criminology	Mathematical Science	Visual Arts

Bachelor of Laws (Honours)

The ANU Bachelor of Laws (Honours) is an internationally-recognised, world-class undergraduate law degree. As a student at Australia's national law school, you'll gain a unique perspective on how laws are made, applied and reformed.

Duration

Single degree:

Four years full-time or part-time equivalent

Flexible double degree:

Five years full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements for 2023

Admission is based on meeting the minimum ATAR requirement of 97 (IB 39) or an equivalent rank derived from one of the following qualifications:

- An Australian Year 12 qualification or international equivalent
- A completed Associate Diploma, Associate Degree, AQF Diploma, Diploma, AQF Advanced Diploma, Graduate Certificate or international equivalent
- At least one standard full-time year (1.0 FTE) in a single program of degree-level study at an Australian higher education institution or international equivalent
- An approved tertiary preparation course unless subsequent study is undertaken.

In a flexible double degree, you must meet the requirements for each degree.

Admission to practice

Completing an ANU Bachelor of Laws (Honours) and the requisite practical legal training qualifies you to practise law anywhere in Australia and in some other jurisdictions, including New Zealand, India, Singapore, Vietnam, Malaysia and Hong Kong.

What you'll study

Combining the theoretical and practical expertise of leading academics and legal practitioners, the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) provides students with an in-depth knowledge of the role and function of law, and an advanced understanding of how law influences and impacts almost every aspect of our world.

In addition to equipping you with a deep comprehension of law and the contexts in which it operates, the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) encourages you to exercise critical thinking and judgement. These newly acquired skills and understandings will allow you to generate solutions to complex legal and policy problems with growing intellectual independence.

Your learning will take place in a global environment with international programs that allow students to travel to Asia, Europe and the United States. You will be offered opportunities to gain practical experience during your degree through internships, clinical placements, and negotiation and mooted competitions.

The honours component of the program is embedded in the degree structure to improve your career prospects and provide you with a strong foundation for future postgraduate study.

Careers

The ANU Bachelor of Laws (Honours) has global recognition. Our graduates enter traditional legal roles, such as a solicitor or barrister, as well as roles in management, politics, the public service, business, commerce and technology, and communications.

Degree structure

You can study the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) on its own over four years or combined with another discipline as part of a flexible double degree over five years.

Specialisations:

- Corporate and Commercial Law
- International and Comparative Law
- Law Reform, Environmental and Social Justice
- Public Law

Kishaya Lye

Bachelor of Laws (Hons)/Arts

"I thoroughly love the opportunities that ANU provides, such as internships and paid roles. Not many other universities provide such opportunities to further one's development and career prospects.

I appreciate the balance between the networking events and social activities that ANU clubs and societies have, and love how invested and engaged the lecturers and tutors are. They always ensure to deliver material in the most interesting way possible and are sure to help and guide students whenever they're struggling."

Oliver Jongue

Bachelor of Laws (Hons)/International Relations

"What I enjoy most about studying at ANU is interacting with people from all walks of life and learning about courses I am passionate about from industry leaders in Australia's capital city.

Academically, what drew me to ANU was that the University offered a flexible program where you could pursue two degrees simultaneously with the same workload. This enabled me to pursue my dream of gaining a further understanding of law and international relations without compromising either one."

Alumni career outcomes

Your ANU Law degree will open doors to exciting career opportunities across Australia and around the world.

Yasmin Poole

BLIntRel, LLB (Hons) '22

Yasmin Poole is a public speaker, board director and youth advocate. She is passionate about ensuring that young people have a place in Australia's political conversations.

Yasmin is Plan International's National Ambassador and advocates for girls' rights to be recognised around the world. She regularly provides commentary on Australian television and radio programs, including Q+A, The Drum and The Project.

She is a Non-Executive Board Director of OzHarvest, Australia's leading food rescue charity. She previously worked in Pacific Communications at the World Bank where she organised regional campaigns that spotlighted female and gender diverse leaders in the Pacific.

Yasmin was the inaugural Chair of the Victorian Government's Youth Congress where she advised the Minister for Youth on youth policy. She has also represented Australian young people in forums such as APEC, the G20 and the recent Australian Government Jobs and Skills Summit.

She was named 2021 Youth Influencer of the Year by The Martin Luther King Jr Center and Vogue's '21 Australian Women Who Defined 2021', as well as the Australian National University's Student of the Year (Undergraduate) in 2020.

Since graduating from ANU, Yasmin was awarded the Rhodes Scholarship and is undertaking a Masters in Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies at the University of Oxford, where she is researching intersectional public policy. She is the Chair of Council at the Oxford University Student Union.

Mabel Lim

LLB '08, GDLP, MPA '09

Mabel Lim is a Director at the boutique law firm Colquhoun Murphy and leads the firm's wills and estates practice. She holds qualifications in both accounting and law, and her experience spans across all areas of a commercial legal practice. She has a current focus on all aspects of estates practice, which includes estate administration, estate disputes, and family and business succession plans that can involve complex issues of trust and property.

Mabel is currently a member of the Wills and Estates Committee of the ACT Law Society and she was recognised as a leading wills and estate litigation lawyer and a commercial litigation lawyer by the peer-reviewed Doyle's Guide in 2022. She has established a reputation amongst colleagues and the broader legal community as an excellent wills and estates lawyer and litigator.

Kieran Pender

BA (Hons) '16, LLB (Hons) '18, GDLP '19

Kieran is a Senior Lawyer at the Human Rights Law Centre. He works to uphold the democratic freedoms of all Australians, with a focus on protecting whistleblowers, defending free speech and ending mass surveillance.

Previously, Kieran was a Senior Legal Advisor with the International Bar Association's (IBA) Legal Policy & Research Unit in London. There, he led the IBA's work on whistleblower protections and authored an international study exposing bullying and sexual harassment in the legal profession, embarking on a global campaign to advocate for positive change.

Kieran has been awarded the Australian Association of Constitutional Law's 2019 Saunders Prize for Excellence in Scholarship, the Pro Bono/Community Lawyer of the Year at the 30 Under 30 Awards 2022, and the ACT Law Society's Young Lawyer of the Year 2021.

Kieran is also an accomplished journalist who writes regularly on human rights, free speech and sports. For The Guardian, he has covered the men and women's FIFA World Cup, Tour de France and 2020 Tokyo Olympic Games.

Clinical courses

Clinical courses allow you to engage with real clients, real problems and real deadlines in a real-world environment. Clinical placements may be undertaken in a community agency, community legal centre or non-government organisation where you will get the opportunity to explore law reform and social justice issues relevant to that field of practice.

Law and Development Clinic

ANU College of Law students will have the opportunity to collaborate with students and supervising academic staff at a law school in a developing country. The choice of developing country and the choice of partner law school will be at the discretion of the ANU College of Law, and will align with partnerships with developing country law schools, the ANU international strategy, unit learning outcomes and assessments, and safety.

Legal Education for True Justice: Indigenous Perspectives and Deep Listening on Country

Based in Alice Springs in the Northern Territory, this course presents principles and tools to support reappraisal and future leadership to better address legal and societal dimensions of justice, rights and empowerment for First Nations peoples.

Prison Legal Literacy Clinic

During this course, you will work with other students to deliver interactive legal literacy sessions to a cohort of detainees at the Alexander Maconochie Centre, the only adult prison in the ACT. Topics are chosen by detainees and are as diverse as detainee interests, ranging from parole to family law. You will explore social justice and law reform issues in relation to detainee experiences.

Youth Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a clinical placement in the Youth Law Centre, a non-profit legal service for ACT youth aged 12–25 years. You will gain hands-on experience in a community legal practice environment, provide legal assistance to young people under the supervision of practising solicitors, and explore social justice and law reform issues in relation to youth legal needs in the ACT.

Environmental Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a clinical placement at the Environmental Defenders Office in the ACT under the supervision of practising solicitors. You will gain practical legal skills in environmental and planning law. You will also have the opportunity to explore law reform issues relating to environmental justice and consider the role of a lawyer in this field of practice.

International Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a work placement at a government agency or non-government organisation (NGO). You will gain practical legal experience applying international law to real-world issues in an agency or organisation that is active on international law issues.

Community Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a clinical placement at Canberra Community Law, a community legal centre for low-income and disadvantaged people in the ACT. You will gain hands-on experience in a community legal practice environment, provide legal information and undertake casework under the supervision of practising solicitors.

Public Interest Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a work placement at an ACT community agency. You will gain practical legal skills in public interest law and get to critically consider legal practice approaches and the role of lawyers in relation to individual clients and client groups.

Varshini Viswanath

Bachelor of Laws (Hons)/International Relations

"What I enjoy most about ANU is its size. It boasts a beautiful, green campus with historical and modern buildings. At the same time, it is compact and easy to navigate. But most importantly, the ratio of students to staff makes it so every student can feel like they can get help, be recognised for their accomplishments, and feel like they belong.

"Canberra is like the ANU of Australia—an important city, but with the comforts of a small town. It is easier to feel like a 'fish' in a pond instead of a daunting ocean. As an international student, coming to ANU did not feel as intimidating because of these perks."

Canberra—the capital advantage

At ANU, you'll be warmly welcomed into a safe, inclusive and collaborative environment that facilitates immersion and offers a strong sense of togetherness and community spirit.

Our proximity to the High Court of Australia, Parliament House, Commonwealth courts and federal agencies offers unparalleled access to legal practitioners, members of the judiciary and government policymakers, many of whom are ANU Law alumni.

Canberra offers a different cultural experience to other Australian cities and is incredibly easy to get around—the city has the shortest commute times of any major Australian city and a light-rail network.

Most liveable city

Canberra is one of the world's most liveable cities, ranking first for quality of life ahead of Sydney and Melbourne.

2022 Numbeo Quality of Life Index

Safest

Canberra is considered one of the safest cities in Australia with one of the lowest crime rates nationally.

police.act.gov.au.

Global community

A city of just over 450,000 people with more than 29 per cent of our residents born overseas, Canberra is a multicultural city with a strong sense of community.
