ANU COLLEGE
OF LAW

Welcome from the Dean

The Australian National University (ANU) is unique in Australia. Ranked 18th in the world for Law and Legal Studies by the Times Higher Education World University Rankings (2023) and based in the nation's capital city, the University attracts leading academics and outstanding students from Australia and around the world.

For more than 60 years, the ANU College of Law has been the educational home to some of the most remarkable people from across the world: visionaries, influential leaders, researchers, and individuals creating impact and social change nationally, regionally and globally.

This, coupled with our role as the national university, means we have a responsibility to be ambitious, bold and transformative in our approaches to teaching and learning. We are poised to provide the next generation of leaders and global citizens with the skills required for the challenges and careers of the future.

Our campus is located in the heart of the nation's capital, alongside foreign missions, the Australian Parliament, leading national institutions, research organisations and government departments. As Australia's national law school, our researchers have a unique relationship with the Commonwealth Government, providing expert advice to Australia's leaders and decision makers to ensure the advancement of the nation.

We are looking for people who find true joy in learning and following an idea to see where it will lead because it is exciting. We seek people with passion, who want to go beyond established boundaries and forge new paths to the future.

If you would like the opportunity to be extraordinary, then ANU will nurture you to achieve your potential.

I look forward to welcoming you to ANU in 2024.

World-class experts

At ANU you will be guided by some of the world's brightest minds, have access to world-class learning facilities and enjoy opportunities that are unique to studying law in the nation's capital — the city where laws and policies are made.

Associate Professor Wayne Morgan

Associate Dean (Education)

"If you want to change the world, study law. If you want to learn at one of the world's leading law schools, join us at the ANU College of Law. Education with us gives you the knowledge, skills and ethical judgement to bring about change with creative solutions to the world's biggest policy and legal challenges. As teachers and researchers at the national law school, we bring together the inspiration and expertise to guide the leaders of tomorrow."

Wayne Morgan is an Associate Professor and the Associate Dean (Education) at the ANU College of Law. Associate Professor Morgan is internationally recognised as a pioneer in the field of queer legal theory. He undertakes interdisciplinary research focused on social justice and law reform which has contributed to a number of test cases before tribunals and courts at the national and international level, including cases before the High Court of Australia and the United Nations Human Rights Committee.

Dr Anton Moiseienko

"I teach two Master of Laws courses, Financial Crime Law and Transnational Anti-Corruption Laws, that largely respond to contemporary developments. One of the joys of teaching them is that they sit at the 'sweet spot' between practical relevance; and novelty. The topics I teach are those that I think are of greatest relevance and interest; the same principle guides my research. Whether we talk about the role of tax havens or due diligence obligations of banks, the courses will both prepare students for a professional career in financial crime-related areas and demystify some of the concepts that all of us come across anytime we open a newspaper."

Dr Anton Moiseienko is a lecturer at the ANU College of Law. His work focuses on transnational crime, economic crime and cybercrime, as well as legal and policy aspects of targeted sanctions.

Associate Professor Akshaya Kamalnath

"We offer a range of innovative courses with global and interdisciplinary perspectives. Specialisations within the program provide flexibility in terms of allowing for online and hybrid courses. The Master of Laws program is vibrant, not only because students get to learn from top researchers from the College and external experts, but also because of the diverse student body and their contributions to the learning environment."

Associate Professor Akshaya Kamalnath's research and teaching areas are corporate law, corporate governance and corporate insolvency law. She has published on areas such as diversity within corporations, corporate social responsibility, artificial intelligence and corporate governance, and equity crowdfunding regulation.

Associate Professor Jonathan Liljeblad

"The ANU College of Law is active in promoting work-integrated learning (WIL) and mooting as part of its curriculum. WIL and mooting provide experiential learning opportunities that expose students to the practice of law across a range of career fields. Such opportunities immerse students in professional settings, allowing them to advance from learning law in the classroom into acquisition of practical knowledge and skills relevant to doing law in the workplace."

Associate Professor Jonathan Liljeblad is a sociolegal scholar whose fieldwork is mostly in Southeast Asia, where his studies are supported by various international aid organisations. He is the Director of Internships at the ANU College of Law.

What you can study

Postgraduate coursework will deepen your knowledge and expand your skills to equip you for career success in your chosen field.

Admission into most, but not all, of our postgraduate coursework programs requires completion of a Bachelor's degree as a minimum.

Flexible study options

Whichever option you choose, you will benefit from an emphasis on flexibility and accessibility, with intensive classes and online learning allowing you to balance postgraduate study with employment, family or personal commitments.

We also offer a range of short-term professional development courses to allow you to study a single subject without having to apply for a full postgraduate degree.

Juris Doctor

Three years full-time or part-time equivalent

The Juris Doctor is ideal for those who have completed a Bachelor's degree in another discipline, are looking to change or advance their career, and are seeking to be admitted as a legal practitioner in Australia and some other jurisdictions.

Master of International Law and Diplomacy

Two years full-time or part-time equivalent

The Master of International Law and Diplomacy will equip you with the knowledge and skills to succeed in the current political and business environment where policy, law and dispute resolution intersect.

Master of Financial Management and Law

Two years full-time or part-time equivalent

This program is highly suited to finance and legal professionals aspiring to broaden their expertise or fast-track their senior management career.

Master of Laws

One year full-time or part-time equivalent

Open to law and non-law graduates, the Master of Laws is ideal for those who want to gain advanced legal knowledge and specialist skills in their chosen area of interest.

Graduate Certificate of Law

Six months full-time or part-time equivalent

The Graduate Certificate of Law is ideal for those who have completed a Bachelor's degree in another discipline or have at least 10 years' work experience in an ANZSCO Skill Level 1 role, and wish to develop their knowledge of Australian and international legal systems and how laws are created, interpreted and applied.

Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law

Six months full-time or part-time equivalent

The Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law is taught entirely online and includes a range of law electives including information technology, legal app development, blockchain and legal innovation, cyber warfare, artificial intelligence and media law.

Shailja Rawal Master of Laws

Within the first months of arriving in Canberra, it quickly felt like 'home'. I remember having one suitcase in my hand and thousands of dreams in my mind when I started my LLM. The ANU College of Law provided me the comfort of a home, guidance of a mentor and companionship of a friend.

Being a research-led university, ANU has sparked my desire of exploring the unexplored and allowed me to dream big. The lectures, tutorials and interactions with academics provide me with a food for thought and a new perspective that I had not previously conceptualised. It is always a great learning experience to interact with professors and peers both within and beyond classrooms.

Shashwat Tripathi Juris Doctor

Studying law at ANU was the best decision I have ever made. Our classes are taught by the best legal brains in a small, interactive and very practice-focused manner. Applying this exceptional legal academic training, I represented ANU at the Australian Parliament and spoke on law reform to Members of Parliament and Senators, led the ANU International Law Society as its president, and led the ANU Journal of Law and Technology as its editor-in-chief.

The ANU College of Law's national and global reputation also enabled me to work at some of the most prominent multinational law firms in Australia and Singapore. My fellow classmates have also successfully gained work experience in government departments, federal and supreme courts, international organisations, and so much more beyond law.

Juris Doctor

The ANU Juris Doctor (JD) is an internationally-recognised program designed for graduates of non-law disciplines. It provides the qualification required for admission as a lawyer in Australia and some other jurisdictions.

Duration

Three years full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements

Bachelor's degree or international equivalent with a minimum GPA of 5/7 (any discipline). If you have undertaken more than one tertiary qualification the GPA will be determined by the highest GPA of all completed qualifications.

Program structure

The ANU Juris Doctor combines core foundational legal studies with a distinctive capstone experience incorporating practical clinical studies, internships or a research project, where you get to experience the law in action.

During your degree, you will study a range of compulsory courses in foundational areas of law that include international law, administrative law, corporations law, criminal law, contracts, evidence and litigation.

You can also tailor your degree to suit your interests and career goals by selecting electives from a range of contemporary topics in law, including environment and climate law, international trade law, health law and bioethics, information technology law, international security law and human rights law.

Clinical courses

Clinical courses allow you to engage with clients, problems and deadlines in a real-world environment. Clinical placements may be undertaken in a community agency, community legal centre or non-government organisation where you will get the opportunity to explore law reform and social justice issues relevant to that field of practice.

Admission to practice

Before you can practise law in Australia, you must complete practical legal training (PLT). PLT provides the practical skills and knowledge you'll need as a legal professional, and allows you to be admitted as a lawyer.

Careers

The ANU Juris Doctor has global recognition and graduates enter traditional legal roles such as a solicitor or barrister, as well as roles in management, politics, the public service, business, commerce, technology and communications.

Master of Financial Management and Law

Market behaviours significantly shape our society and the financial sector is always a central concern for policymaking. This joint degree is designed to equip graduates with a sophisticated level of understanding of finance and financial systems, alongside knowledge of the legal and regulatory context and frameworks that shape financial sector activity and decision-making.

Duration

Two years full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements

Bachelor's degree or international equivalent with a minimum GPA of 5/7.

Program structure

This joint degree will be taught by internationally-recognised scholars from both the ANU College of Law and the College of Business and Economics.

More than merely a series of 'finance law' subjects taught within a Master of Laws, this degree draws on course content from different disciplinary areas, combining rigorous courses on essential elements of finance with compulsory and elective law courses.

Careers

This program is highly suited to those working or seeking to work in financial and advisory firms, policy and regulatory bodies, the legal profession, and beyond.

Master of International Law and Diplomacy

The Master of International Law and Diplomacy is a joint degree that addresses needs arising from the unique dynamics of the current political and business environment where policy, law and dispute resolution intersect.

Duration

Two years full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements

Bachelor's degree or international equivalent with a minimum GPA of 5/7.

Or

Bachelor's degree at pass mark, GPA 4/7 with a minimum of three years full-time equivalent work experience at ANZSCO Skill Level 1 in a field related to the program.

Program structure

This highly valuable qualification deepens your understanding of the way diplomacy and law operate in, and interact with, the modern world. It equips you with legal and diplomatic skills and knowledge for the 21st century job market. The degree also provides exciting study and career options in the prestigious arenas of diplomatic and international legal practice.

You will be taught by internationally-recognised scholars from both the ANU College of Law and the Asia-Pacific College of Diplomacy. You will also learn from senior diplomatic and international legal practitioners with a specific focus on transnational diplomacy, roles of non-state actors, negotiation and conflict resolution, international law principles and more.

Careers

Graduates of the Master of International Law and Diplomacy may work within foreign ministries, as academics, senior staff in the United Nations, World Bank, International Monetary Fund and transnational corporations.

Master of Laws

Open to both law and non-law graduates, the ANU Master of Laws (LLM) is ideal for those looking to deepen their knowledge in a specific area of law, those who are planning to enter a new area of practice or those for whom a knowledge of law would be beneficial in their career, including public policy professionals, regulators and managers.

Duration

One year full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements

Bachelor of Laws, Bachelor of Laws (Honours), Juris Doctor, Graduate Certificate of Law, Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law or Bachelor's degree in any cognate discipline with a minimum GPA of 5.

Or

Bachelor of Laws, Bachelor of Laws (Honours), Juris Doctor, Graduate Certificate of Law, Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law or Bachelor's degree in any cognate discipline with a minimum GPA of four plus two years of relevant professional experience.

Advance standing (credit)

Students who have completed the ANU Juris Doctor within the last seven years are eligible to receive credit for four elective subjects for the ANU Master of Laws.

Program structure

The flexible curriculum of the LLM allows you to tailor your studies to suit your personal interests and career aspirations. You can build your own program by selecting from a range of contemporary topics in law, including information technology, aviation and space, environment and climate, cyber warfare, international security and human rights.

Alternatively you can choose to specialise in one of the following areas:

- Human Security Law
- International Law
- Private and Commercial Law
- Public Law
- New Technologies Law

The LLM offers both flexibility and accessibility. Courses are available in a range of delivery modes, including full-time, part-time, on-campus, online, evening or intensive, to enable you to fit your studies around your professional and personal commitments.

Build your own LLM program

You can build your own Master of Laws program by selecting courses from a wide range of topics, including:

- Criminal law
- Environment and climate
- Information technology and cyber warfare
- International security and human rights

Master of Laws specialisations

Human Security Law

As the world's population nears eight billion and the demand for resources increases, there is a need to understand the consequences of climate change, environmental and other natural disasters, conflict, pandemics, automation, under-developed economies, human rights breaches, and corruption. This specialisation will equip lawyers, professionals and policy-makers with the skills to critically assess topics that will explore these issues from legal, regulatory and policy perspectives.

International Law

International law regulates the relations between states and other actors at the multilateral level. It can affect society in a variety of ways, both internationally and domestically. It helps us to explain and analyse interactions in the international community and their impact within national societies. This specialisation will give you the skills necessary to navigate the international legal system, with the opportunity to focus on areas of particular interest through a wide array of elective courses, many of which require the completion of a substantial research paper.

Private Commercial Law

This specialisation will provide you with insights into the increasingly complex global environment in which individuals and corporations operate. The broad selection of courses, in areas as diverse as sports law and corporate social responsibility, allows you to focus your studies on areas of specific interest to your current, or future, career.

Public Law

Studying public law involves you examining both the process and product of government regulation, and the underlying legal structures upon which government is built. This specialisation combines comparative and multidisciplinary perspectives in examining the design, implementation and effectiveness of regulation in Australia. This enables you to develop a strong understanding of the modern regulatory state and the laws that govern its operation.

New Technologies Law

Technology is transforming our society and global relationships. Industry and government need a new generation of lawyers who understand the legal, commercial and policy implications for the design and implementation of new products and business models. This specialisation will equip lawyers and other professionals with the skills and scholarship needed to face novel challenges, and to develop innovative and practical approaches to solving problems presented by new technologies.

Charles Zhan

JD '11

"I chose to research anti-dumping without ever considering that one day I would become an anti-dumping lawyer. At the time, it was just an interesting thesis topic to me."

Charles Zhan is a partner at Moulis Legal, a boutique commercial and international law firm where he specialises in trade defence and cross-border transactions.

His thesis, undertaken during his Juris Doctor studies, paved the way for his future career—even if he didn't know it at the time.

At Moulis Legal, Charles heads the firm's China Business Desk, representing multinationals from various industries on trade defence matters including cross-border commercial disputes, international investments, countervailing investigations and, of course, anti-dumping.

Alan Wu

GDLP '12, LLM '16

"An education in law is an inquiry into the nature of justice; how we can tailor incentives and sanctions to better build a fairer society where we can all succeed. I knew ANU, and the ANU College of Law, to be a place that engaged us in this inquiry, and that spurred us to action by strengthening our capacity, and our resolve, to build the solutions we sought."

Alan Wu is a lifelong champion for a more participatory and inclusive society. As chair of the nation's peak body for young people, the Australian Youth Affairs Coalition, Alan led the successful campaign to re-establish a Federal Government Minister for Youth.

Alan is a public sector lawyer, a career made possible by his study at the ANU College of Law. He remains active in the ANU community as a mentor. In 2019, he was named an Obama Foundation Leader in the Asia Pacific.

Graduate Certificate of Law

This program is ideal for those who have completed a Bachelor's degree in another discipline and wish to develop their knowledge of Australian and international legal systems and how laws are created, interpreted and applied.

The Graduate Certificate of Law also provides a pathway to the Master of Laws (LLM) for graduates from non-cognate disciplines.

Duration

Six months full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements

Bachelor's degree or international equivalent with a minimum GPA of 4.0/7.0, or at least 10 years of work experience in an ANZSCO Skill Level 1 role.

Program structure

The Graduate of Certificate of Law offers you the flexibility to study courses from a range of contemporary topics in law, including information technology, aviation, environment and climate, cyber warfare, media, international security and human rights.

Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law

Taught entirely online, the ANU Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law gives you the skills and knowledge to accelerate your career. Understand the application — and evolution — of law in the digital era.

This qualification is ideal for those who have completed a Bachelor's degree in another discipline and wish to develop their knowledge of Australian and international legal systems, and how laws are created, interpreted and applied to new technologies.

The program also provides a pathway to the Master of Laws (LLM).

Duration

Six months full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements

Bachelor's degree or international equivalent with a minimum GPA of 4.0/7.0, or at least 10 years of work experience in an ANZSCO Skill Level 1 role.

Program structure

The Graduate Certificate of New Technologies Law offers you the flexibility to study courses from a range of contemporary courses in law, including Cybercrime, Health Law and Bioethics, Blockchain and Legal Innovation, Cyber Warfare, Artificial Intelligence, and Work and the Gig Economy.

Professional development short courses

We offer a range of short-term professional development courses to allow you to study a single subject without having to apply for a full postgraduate degree.

Duration

Four days — 12 weeks

Short-term professional development courses enable you to update or refresh your knowledge, expand your skillset, focus on a specialised area of law relating to your current role or gain new knowledge and skills to prepare you for a new role.

Assessment-free courses are taught by world-class academics and guest lecturers with real-world professional experience, and delivered in an intensive format of between four days to 12 weeks to suit working professionals.

Postgraduate research

As Australia's national law school, the ANU College of Law has an enviable research profile in Australia and abroad.

Working under the supervision of some of Australia's best-known legal minds, higher degree research (HDR) students at the ANU College of Law enjoy a vibrant research culture, and are provided with the support, guidance and opportunity to deeply engage with law and explore the impact and influence it has in our world.

With particular strengths in a number of key legal areas — including international law, international security law, environmental law, administrative law, constitutional law, and government and regulation — the ANU College of Law offers diverse options for students seeking to undertake higher degree research.

In addition to being supervised by leading scholars, many of whom are regarded as among the best in their field, HDR students benefit from the College's considerable international networks and opportunities to work closely with visitors, researchers and academics from some of the world's leading law schools.

The ANU College of Law is a magnet for visiting academics and speakers from around the world, giving you unique access to the best of the global legal fraternity.

In consultation with your supervisor, you can tailor your focus of study and make a significant contribution to research in the field of law with the potential to create positive change in society through the following options:

Doctor of Philosophy in Law

Four years (full-time) or eight years (part-time); 100,000-word thesis

Offered to students seeking an opportunity to engage in high-quality, independent research, the Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) requires submission of a thesis that makes a substantial contribution to learning in the field of law.

Master of Philosophy in Law

One to two years (full-time) or part-time equivalent; 60,000-word thesis

The Master of Philosophy requires completion of a thesis that makes an original and important contribution to human knowledge, research and development.

Canberra—the capital advantage

At ANU, you'll be warmly welcomed into a safe, inclusive and collaborative environment that facilitates immersion and offers a strong sense of togetherness and community spirit.

Our proximity to the High Court of Australia, Parliament House, Commonwealth courts and federal agencies offers unparalleled access to legal practitioners, members of the judiciary and government policymakers, many of whom are ANU Law alumni.

Canberra offers a different cultural experience to other Australian cities and is incredibly easy to get around—the city has the shortest commute times of any major Australian city and a light-rail network.

Most liveable city

Canberra is one of the world's most liveable cities, ranking first for quality of life ahead of Sydney and Melbourne.

2023 Numbeo Quality of Life Index

Safest

Canberra is considered one of the safest cities in Australia with one of the lowest crime rates nationally.

police.act.gov.au

Global community

A city of just over 450,000 people with more than 29 per cent of our residents born overseas, Canberra is a multicultural city with a strong sense of community.
