Welcome from the Dean

The Australian National University (ANU) is unique in Australia. Ranked 21st in the world for Law and Legal Studies by the Times Higher Education World University Rankings (2024) and based in the nation's capital city, the University attracts leading academics and outstanding students from Australia and around the world.

For more than 60 years, the ANU Law School has been the educational home to some of the most remarkable people from across the world: visionaries, influential leaders, researchers, and individuals creating impact and social change nationally, regionally and globally.

This, coupled with our role as the national university, means we have a responsibility to be ambitious, bold and transformative in our approaches to teaching and learning. We are poised to provide the next generation of leaders and global citizens with the skills required for the challenges and careers of the future.

Our campus is located in the heart of the nation's capital, alongside foreign missions, the Australian Parliament, leading national institutions, research organisations and government departments. As Australia's national law school, our researchers have a unique relationship with the Commonwealth Government, providing expert advice to Australia's leaders and decision makers to ensure the advancement of the nation.

We are looking for people who find true joy in learning and following an idea to see where it will lead because it is exciting. We seek people with passion, who want to go beyond established boundaries and forge new paths to the future.

If you would like the opportunity to be extraordinary, then ANU will nurture you to achieve your potential.

I look forward to welcoming you to ANU in 2025.

World-class experts

At ANU you will be guided by some of the world's brightest minds, have access to world-class learning facilities and enjoy opportunities that are unique to studying law in the nation's capital — the city where laws and policies are made.

Associate Professor Wayne Morgan
Associate Dean (Education)

"If you want to change the world, study law. If you want to learn at one of the world's leading law schools, join us at the ANU Law School. Education with us gives you the knowledge, skills and ethical judgement to bring about change with creative solutions to the world's biggest policy and legal challenges. As teachers and researchers at the national law school, we bring together the inspiration and expertise to guide the leaders of tomorrow."

Wayne Morgan is an Associate Professor and the Associate Dean (Education) at the ANU College of Law, Governance and Policy. He is internationally recognised as a pioneer in the field of queer legal theory. He undertakes interdisciplinary research focused on social justice and law reform, which has contributed to a number of test cases before tribunals and courts at the national and international level, including cases before the High Court of Australia and the United Nations Human Rights Committee.

Professor Ron Levy

"ANU is one of Australia's—and the world's—leading research institutions. Students can expect to learn from global experts in areas such as constitutional law, international law, law and technology, environmental law and commercial law. Classes focus in equal measures on learning the outlines of legal doctrines and understanding the social significance of those doctrines. An exceptional range of subject matters and programs help to train the lawyers, policymakers and legal academics of tomorrow. Teaching occurs on the unique sprawling forested grounds of ANU, which are in close proximity to leading national and political institutions."

Professor Ron Levy's work adapts the political theory of deliberative democracy to understand how contentious legal problems might be settled more effectively. He is the winner of several research awards including grants from Australian and overseas funding bodies. His extensive research, media commentary and governmental/NGO advice approaches contentious areas such as armed conflict, deeply-divided societies, Indigenous-settler conflicts, human rights and the environment.

Associate Professor Heather Roberts SFHEA

"At the ANU Law School, students are within walking distance of key institutions of government, including every level of the judiciary, and can see these institutions in operation. Our Visiting Judges Program also gives students the opportunity to interact with judges nation-wide, each with different backgrounds and experiences. Students can learn first-hand what judges do, their journeys through the profession, and the skills the next generation of legal professionals need to flourish in their careers."

Heather Roberts is an Associate Professor at the ANU Law School and the world's leading scholar on judicial swearing-in ceremonies. This research project is part of her larger research agenda in judicial studies, and is inspired by the question: how does who a judge is make a difference to how the law develops? Her work has been cited by judges and scholars in Australia and internationally, and she is the co-designer of the legal history wall at the Supreme Court of the Australian Capital Territory (ACT).

Professor Rebecca Monson

"Many students come to law school driven by a passion for social, economic, and environmental justice. When looking at my own options for postgraduate study, I chose ANU for its global leadership in legal research, teaching, and policy, particularly in Australia, Asia, and the Pacific. Now, as an academic, I share that learning with students. ANU Law School's focus on social justice and real-world application goes beyond legal doctrines to explore their origins, impacts, and future developments. Our classrooms foster collaborative learning, tackling global challenges like the climate crisis together."

Professor Rebecca Monson specializes in law and development across Australia and the Pacific at ANU Law School. She serves on the boards of the Australian Association for Pacific Studies, the Commission on Legal Pluralism, and the Global Working Group on Customary and Informal Justice Systems. She advises governments, aid donors, and NGOs on gender equality, extractive industries, and climate adaptation. A recipient of major research grants, she won the 2023 Australian Legal Research Awards book prize for Gender, Property and Politics in the Pacific (Cambridge University Press, 2023).

What you can study

Whether you study law on its own or combine it with another discipline as part of an ANU flexible double degree, the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) will equip you with the legal knowledge and practical skills required for success in a diverse range of fields.

Single degree

Four years full-time or part-time equivalent

If you aspire to pursue a career in legal practice, then a single specialised qualification in law is your fast-track to becoming a lawyer.

Flexible double degree

Five years full-time or part-time equivalent

A flexible double degree will allow you to satisfy your curiosity and broaden your career options even further. This study option allows you to tailor your studies to qualify you for your dream job, or you can follow your head and your heart by combining a practical degree with another in a field of your passion.

Whatever approach you take, you'll graduate with two qualifications and a competitive edge in employability.

Benefits of a flexible double degree

- Study two Bachelor degrees at the same time and graduate with two qualifications
- Two qualifications provides a clear advantage when applying for jobs
- It takes less time than studying two undergraduate degrees separately
- You will have the same full-time workload as a student undertaking just one Bachelor degree

Combining your Bachelor of Laws (Honours) with one of 30 other ANU undergraduate degrees allows you to personalise your studies and broaden your career horizons.

Bachelor of Laws (Honours)

The ANU Bachelor of Laws (Honours) is an internationally-recognised, world-class undergraduate law degree. As a student at Australia's national law school, you'll gain a unique perspective on how laws are made, applied and reformed.

Duration

Single degree:

Four years full-time or part-time equivalent

Flexible double degree:

Five years full-time or part-time equivalent

Entry requirements for 2025

Admission is based on meeting the minimum ATAR requirement of 97 (IB 41) or an equivalent rank derived from one of the following qualifications:

- An Australian Year 12 qualification or international equivalent
- A completed Associate Diploma, Associate Degree, AQF Diploma, Diploma, AQF Advanced Diploma, Graduate Certificate or international equivalent
- At least one standard full-time year (1.0 FTE) in a single program of degree-level study at an Australian higher education institution or international equivalent
- An approved tertiary preparation course unless subsequent study is undertaken.

In a flexible double degree, you must meet the requirements for each degree.

Admission to practice

Completing an ANU Bachelor of Laws (Honours) and the requisite practical legal training qualifies you to practise law anywhere in Australia and in some other jurisdictions, including New Zealand, India, Singapore, Vietnam, Malaysia and Hong Kong.

What you'll study

Combining the theoretical and practical expertise of leading academics and legal practitioners, the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) provides students with an in-depth knowledge of the role and function of law, and an advanced understanding of how law influences and impacts almost every aspect of our world.

In addition to equipping you with a deep comprehension of law and the contexts in which it operates, the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) encourages you to exercise critical thinking and judgement. These newly acquired skills and understandings will allow you to generate solutions to complex legal and policy problems with growing intellectual independence.

Your learning will take place in a global environment with international programs that allow students to travel to Asia, Europe and the United States. You will be offered opportunities to gain practical experience during your degree through internships, clinical placements, and negotiation and mooted competitions.

The honours component of the program is embedded in the degree structure to improve your career prospects and provide you with a strong foundation for future postgraduate study.

Careers

The ANU Bachelor of Laws (Honours) has global recognition. Our graduates enter traditional legal roles, such as a solicitor or barrister, as well as roles in management, politics, the public service, business, commerce and technology, and communications.

Degree structure

You can study the Bachelor of Laws (Honours) on its own over four years or combined with another discipline as part of a flexible double degree over five years.

Specialisations:

- Corporate and Commercial Law
- International and Comparative Law
- Law Reform, Environmental and Social Justice
- Public Law

Amelie Bonney

Bachelor of Laws (Hons)/International Relations

I chose law at ANU because I wanted a combination of academic rigour in my coursework and the social aspect of living on campus. The University's proximity to the heart of Australian lawmaking, with the ACT Supreme Court and Federal Courts being right next to campus, makes it a pretty amazing place to study.

I was concerned about getting 'lost in the crowd' and 'falling through the cracks' at law school. However, the amount of support that ANU offers law students and students more broadly solidified my decision to go here. I've been really impressed by how ANU has supported my learning experience and personal development, particularly through programs like Peer-Assisted Learning (PAL) that have been amazing at demystifying law school and improving the overall learning experience.

Marlow Meares

Bachelor of Arts/Laws (Hons)

The ANU Law School is the best place in Australia to study law. Academically, it is home to some of the best academics in Australia. The courses are broad and insightful, with electives being taught from Central Australia to Cambodia. The Law School also has unique connections to the courts and government, with many classes including guest lectures from the people who decided the cases we study.

More broadly, ANU is a fantastic place to go to university. There is a vibrant on-campus student community, hundreds of active clubs and societies, and academic and non-academic events regularly held across the University.

Alumni career outcomes

Your ANU Law degree will open doors to exciting career opportunities across Australia and around the world.

Annie Haggar

BA/LLB '06, GDLP '07

Annie Haggar's journey into the intersection of law and technology began at a dinner party with her parents, where she was introduced to friends who were starting technology law firms.

Joining as their first employee, Annie faced a steep learning curve, delving into government procurement, contract templates, and managing information technology services.

For nearly two decades, Annie has worked on various projects, embracing the constant change that keeps her excited for what lies ahead. She acknowledges that technology's rapid pace has complicated the intersection of emerging tech, such as artificial intelligence, robotics and the metaverse, with the law.

Mabel Lim

LLB '08, GDLP, MPA '09

Mabel Lim is a director at the boutique law firm Colquhoun Murphy and leads the firm's wills and estates practice. She holds qualifications in both accounting and law, and her experience spans all areas of a commercial legal practice. She has a current focus on all aspects of estates practice, which includes estate administration, estate disputes, and family and business succession plans that can involve complex issues of trust and property.

Mabel is currently a member of the Wills and Estates Committee of the ACT Law Society. She was recognised as a leading wills and estate litigation lawyer and a commercial litigation lawyer by the peer-reviewed Doyle's Guide in 2022. She has established a reputation among colleagues and the broader legal community as an excellent wills and estates lawyer and litigator.

Kieran Pender

BA (Hons) '16, LLB (Hons) '18, GDLP '19

Kieran is a senior lawyer at the Human Rights Law Centre. He works to uphold the democratic freedoms of all Australians, with a focus on protecting whistleblowers, defending free speech and ending mass surveillance.

Previously, Kieran was a senior legal advisor with the International Bar Association's (IBA) Legal Policy & Research Unit in London. There, he led the IBA's work on whistleblower protections and authored an international study exposing bullying and sexual harassment in the legal profession, embarking on a global campaign to advocate for positive change.

Kieran was awarded the Australian Association of Constitutional Law's 2019 Saunders Prize for Excellence in Scholarship, the Pro Bono/Community Lawyer of the Year at the 30 Under 30 Awards 2022, and the ACT Law Society's Young Lawyer of the Year 2021.

Kieran is also an accomplished journalist who writes regularly on human rights, free speech and sports. For The Guardian, he has covered the men and women's FIFA World Cup, Tour de France and 2020 Tokyo Olympic Games.

Clinical courses

Clinical courses allow you to engage with real clients, real problems and real deadlines in a real-world environment. Clinical placements may be undertaken in a community agency, community legal centre or non-government organisation where you will get the opportunity to explore law reform and social justice issues relevant to that field of practice.

Law and Development Clinic

ANU Law School students will have the opportunity to collaborate with students and supervising academic staff at a law school in a developing country. The choices of developing country and partner law school will be at the discretion of the ANU Law School, and will align with partnerships with developing country law schools, the ANU international strategy, unit learning outcomes and assessments, and safety.

Legal Education for True Justice: Indigenous Perspectives and Deep Listening on Country

Based in Alice Springs in the Northern Territory, this course presents principles and tools to support reappraisal and future leadership to better address legal and societal dimensions of justice, rights and empowerment for First Nations peoples.

Prison Legal Clinic

During this course, you will work with other students to deliver interactive legal literacy sessions to a cohort of detainees at the Alexander Maconochie Centre, the only adult prison in the ACT. Topics are chosen by detainees and are as diverse as detainee interests, ranging from parole to family law. You will explore social justice and law reform issues in relation to detainee experiences.

Youth Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a clinical placement at the Youth Law Centre, a non-profit legal service for ACT youth aged 12–25. You will gain hands-on experience in a community legal practice environment, provide legal assistance to young people under the supervision of practising solicitors, and explore social justice and law reform issues in relation to youth legal needs in the ACT.

Environmental Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a clinical placement at the Environmental Defenders Office in the ACT under the supervision of practising solicitors. You will gain practical legal skills in environmental and planning law. You will also have the opportunity to explore law reform issues relating to environmental justice and consider the role of a lawyer in this field of practice.

International Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a work placement at a government agency or non-government organisation (NGO). You will gain practical legal experience applying international law to real-world issues in an agency or organisation that is active on international law issues.

Indigenous Community Legal Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a work placement at a community law practice that provides legal assistance to Indigenous people. You will gain practical legal skills that include interviewing, casework skills and advising Indigenous clients under the supervision of practising solicitors.

Community Law Clinic

During this course, you will undertake a clinical placement at Canberra Community Law, a community legal centre for low-income and disadvantaged people in the ACT. You will gain hands-on experience in a community legal practice environment, provide legal information and undertake casework under the supervision of practising solicitors.

Canberra—the capital advantage

At ANU, you'll be warmly welcomed into a safe, inclusive and collaborative environment that facilitates immersion and offers a strong sense of togetherness and community spirit.

Our proximity to the High Court of Australia, Parliament House, Commonwealth courts and federal agencies offers unparalleled access to legal practitioners, members of the judiciary and government policymakers, many of whom are ANU Law alumni.

Canberra offers a different cultural experience to other Australian cities and is incredibly easy to get around — the city has the shortest commute times of any major Australian city and a light-rail network.

Most liveable city

Canberra is one of the world's most liveable cities, ranking second in the world and first in Australia.

2024 Numbeo Quality of Life Index

Safest

Canberra is considered one of the safest cities in Australia with one of the lowest crime rates nationally.

police.act.gov.au

Global community

A city of just over 460,000 people with more than 31 per cent of our residents born overseas, Canberra is a multicultural city with a strong sense of community.
