Master of Laws in Government and Regulation

DURATION: 1 YEAR FULL-TIME | UP TO 5 YEARS PART-TIME

The ANU Master of Laws program that offers an advanced understanding of – and specialist insight to – the legal frameworks underlying government and the regulatory state.

Program overview
Exploring the process and product of regulation, the ANU Master of Laws in Government and Regulation provides you with advanced knowledge of the legal frameworks and structures underlying government and the modern regulatory state.

Combining comparative and multi-disciplinary perspectives to examine the design, implementation and effectiveness of regulation in Australia, the ANU Master of Laws in Government and Regulation equips students with a strong understanding of the modern regulatory state, and the role of key areas of commercial and public law.

Taking advantage of the ANU College of Law’s proximity to the Australian Parliament, the High Court and key government agencies, the ANU Master of Laws in Government and Regulation is taught by a specialist team of experts, including senior executive staff from the Australian Public Service, government lawyers, parliamentary drafters and other practitioners who bring invaluable first-hand experience and expertise.

Offering a high degree of flexibility, the program allows students to choose from a large number of elective courses – including administrative and constitutional law, competition law, corporate governance and labour law – to suit their specific interests or career requirements.

Elective course options include:
> Occupational Health and Safety Law
> Commercial Law
> Citizenship Law in Context
> Australian Aviation Law

In addition, an increasing number of elective courses are offered fully online, including:
> Commercial Drafting
> Technology Transfer and Commercialisation

For information on additional elective courses – including those online – search ‘ANU LLM Timetable 2017’.

Career options and opportunities
The ANU Master of Laws in Government and Regulation is ideal for lawyers and non-lawyers – in the public, private, NGO and NFP sectors – who need to acquire familiarity with legal issues underlying government regulation.

Mode of delivery
The ANU LLM in Government and Regulation is taught intensively – with lectures clustered over 3–4 days and the remainder of the course undertaken online – making it ideal if you live outside of Canberra, or need to balance postgraduate study with employment and other personal commitments.

Admission requirements
Completion of a Bachelor of Laws or Juris Doctor degree with a minimum average of at least 50%, or completion of a non-law degree and the ANU Graduate Certificate of Law with a minimum average of at least 50%.
