AN ACTIVE APPROACH TO STUDYING LAW

Opportunities for ANU law students

This guide provides law students with information about how to take an active approach to studying law, and useful contacts for legal organisations in Canberra that accept student volunteers.

Published as a Law Reform & Social Justice activity of the ANU College of Law.
Originally researched and compiled by Judy Harrison in 2010 and updated by Justine Poon in 2014.

This guide can be viewed online: law.anu.edu.au/lrsj

This guide is current as at 1 January 2014.

This guide relies on information provided by the agencies and organisations referred to, on request. Descriptions of the activities, and details of contact information, may have changed since they were provided.

If you have updates or additions for inclusion in An Active Approach please let us know at: lrsj@anu.edu.au

WHY AN ACTIVE APPROACH?

Don't know why you're studying law?

'I fell into the law degree. I got the marks and I figured I'd choose something at the top of the range. I don't know what I want to do. I don't know if I want to be a lawyer or what kind of lawyer I want to be. I don't really know what kind of work lawyers do, or whether I'd even like it.'

Studying law to secure your future?

'I chose law because I want a good career and a secure future. People with legal skills, whether working as lawyers or not, have good incomes. Law is a safe option and it has status'.

Studying law to make a difference?

‘I chose law because I want to make a difference. The law connects to everything. I feel angry when I see injustice or things that aren’t as good as they could be. I want to use my knowledge and skills to make a difference’.

Being the best you can?

‘I want to do the best I can regardless of the area of law I go into, or whether I even continue with law as a career. I enjoy studying but sometimes I’m not sure if I’m making progress’.

Losing your way?

‘Sometimes I’m not sure why I’m studying law. Sometimes I’m quite lonely – there is a lot of time being one person in very large groups. I think I need more interaction, more variation and more things to help me stay motivated’.

No time?

‘I work to get myself through uni and I don’t have spare time to do extra things. Sometimes I don’t even feel like a law student because I’m racing to get to lectures and I don’t know a lot of people. I can’t see any connection between the paid work I do and the law. My employment is to pay the bills and it doesn’t have anything to do with preparing for the future’.

Helping family and friends?

‘Now I’m studying law my family and friends keep asking me legal questions assuming I can advise them. I know I can’t advise until I have a legal practicing certificate but it’s embarrassing and I don’t know what to say’.

Some reasons to take an active approach to studying law

- > Build your knowledge and skills
- > Try out different things
- > Provide a context for your law study
- > Prepare for your future
- > Be useful!

Some ways to make it happen

- > Look for opportunities
- > Choose things to be involved in
- > Plan to do different things over the course of your degree
- > Connect the knowledge and skills you develop in other contexts to preparing yourself (easily done e.g. if you are working in hospitality, providing support to friends, being on a working group or committee).

Law students as conduits to legal help

Roles that law students can play

- > Know what legal services are available in the ACT and elsewhere
- > Give information about available legal services
- > Help assemble information about the problem

- > If appropriate, offer to accompany the person to the lawyer/service.

What legal help is available?

Private lawyers

- > Look in the Yellow Pages under 'Solicitors' – note which provide initial advice for free
- > Phone the Law Society for the State or Territory – ask for the names of firms practicing in a particular location or area of law
- > Check the relevant Law Society web site. Use the Law Council of Australia web site for links to its constituent bodies:

More information

- > lawcouncil.asn.au/lawcouncil/index.php/about-the-law-council-of-australia/constituent-bodies-and-directors

Free legal help and legal aid

Legal Aid Commissions (LACs)

- > There are eight LACs in Australia – one for each State and Territory. All have branch offices

- > All LACs provide free initial legal advice and referral by telephone and by face to face appointment
- > LACs provide free duty lawyer help at some Courts
- > LACs grant legal aid for ongoing legal help but eligibility criteria apply
- > Look in the White Pages under 'Legal Aid' or use the National Legal Aid web site which includes a directory of LACs and their regional offices.

More information

Community Legal Centres

- > There are over 200 CLCs in Australia. Many specialise in particular areas of law and/or focus on particular groups.
- > All CLC's provide free initial legal advice and referral by telephone and face to face appointments in areas of law in which they have expertise
- > CLC's provide ongoing legal help in their specialist area of law / for their target groups, eligibility criteria apply
- > The National Association of Community Legal Centres (NACLC) web site includes a directory of CLC's around Australia and contacts for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Legal Services and Family Violence Prevention Legal Services

More information

- > naclc.org.au

Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander Legal Services (ATSILS)

- > There are ATSILS in each State and Territory, most have branch offices
- > ATSILS provide free legal help to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. The main focus is representation in relation to criminal charges but ATSILS also provide advice in other areas of law.
- > Contacts are in the NACLC services directory and on the Commonwealth Attorney-General's web site

OPPORTUNITIES AROUND AUSTRALIA

The Aurora Project Native Title Internship Program

This internship introduces students to career opportunities in native title and Indigenous affairs, and primarily provides assistance to under resourced and over-worked Native Title Representative Body (NTRB) lawyers.

Applications are open to law students who have completed, or are currently completing, the property law component of their legal studies. There are two intakes for interns: during the summer (6 to 8 weeks) and winter (5 weeks) university breaks. Longer locum opportunities of up to 6 months may also be available.

Internships are with NTRBs and other Indigenous policy organisations or other organisations working in Native Title and related areas located around Australia. Locations of organisations that have participated in the Program include: Adelaide, Alice Springs, Brisbane, Broome, Bundaberg, Cairns, Canberra, Darwin, Geraldton, Kalgoorlie, Mackay, Melbourne, Perth, Port Hedland, Sydney, Thursday Island.

In some circumstances ANU students may be able to obtain course credit for Aurora internships i.e. as a Law Internship if the internship is primarily research based and the time frames fit or, if primarily legal practice based, then via concurrent enrolment in the Graduate Diploma of Legal Workshop (see the information about LLB Course Credit and Concurrent Enrolment in the GDLP below).

PAID LAW-RELATED OR OTHER RELEVANT WORK

Local law firms and the ACT Law Society Law Student Employment Register

Some law students work for local firms and legal practices as rounds clerks (collect mail / file court documents) legal secretaries, paralegals or research assistants.

Law students looking for this type of paid work with local law firms can register with the ACT Law Society. Do this by completing the form on the Law Society web site, then take it or post it to the ACT Law Society.

Conflict Resolution Service

The Conflict Resolution Service periodically offers a Certificate IV in Community Mediation. A person who has completed an appropriate training course can be registered as a mediator under the ACT Mediation Act by an approved agency such as CRS. Once registered the mediator can seek employment with mediation agencies. This usually involves a specific assessment and selection process to ensure that the applicant suits the agency. In CRS' case, when there are vacancies on its mediation panel applicants can seek one of those places.

For information about training programs, Certificate IV in Community Mediation or to register interest in becoming a mediator with CRS, contact the CRS Training & Professional Standards Officer.

CAREERS HELP

ANU Law Students' Society Careers Information

The LSS Careers team works hard all year round to bring students updates about casual and part-time jobs, work placements, government internships, clerkships and graduate positions. We are your go-to people for any concerns you may have about finding work experience and legal work at the end of your degree—be it in a firm, a government department or an NGO, in Australia or overseas! We are always eager to hear any ideas you have about how we can best serve you as law students and members of the legal community. We also promote fun and rewarding volunteer opportunities, and contests and scholarships with a careers focus.

FOR LLB / JD COURSE CREDIT

Did you know . . .

Through ANU College of Law clinical courses law students help provide free legal help to almost 1000 people a year in the ACT.

And that is the tip of the iceberg because ANU law students also contribute as volunteers in ACT non-profit legal services and in many other ways.

Clinical Law Courses

'Clinical' courses involve students working with real clients, real legal problems and real deadlines. Clinical courses also enable students to explore justice, access to justice, ethical and professional issues.

LAWS2267 Clinical Youth Law Course is run at the Youth Law Centre ACT, a free legal advice and referral centre for people aged between 12 and 25. This is a 6 unit course that enables students to gain practical experience in dealing with clients and real-life legal issues. Students must have completed 48 units of law courses to apply and are selected on the basis of quality of application and ballot if necessary.

> programsandcourses.anu.edu.au/course/LAWS2267

LAWS2268 Community Law Clinical Course is run at the Welfare Rights and Legal Centre, and is a 12 unit course requiring students to work two days a week onsite. Students gain first hand experience in working with clients and on client files. To enrol, students must have completed 48 units of law courses, including Property and Administrative law. Enrolments are limited and are allocated by ballot.

> programsandcourses.anu.edu.au/course/LAWS2268

LAWS2240 International Social Justice Clinic is a virtual clinic that places law students in non-government organisational activity in developing countries. Students are supervised regularly by NGO staff through online communications technology. Enrolments are limited and are allocated by ballot.

> programsandcourses.anu.edu.au/course/LAWS2240

ANU Law Internship enables students to undertake an internship in government departments, law firms, parliament, non-government organisations and members of the Faculty. The internship involves the completion of a 5000 word research paper under the supervision of a legal professional in the workplace. Students must contact the law school to request a permission code to enrol.

CONCURRENT ENROLMENT IN THE GDLP

To practice as a lawyer a person must have completed (i) their LLB or JD and (ii) practical legal training which satisfies requirements for admission to legal practice. The ANU Legal Workshop provides Practical Legal Training (PLT) leading to the award of a Graduate Diploma of Legal Practice (GDLP) which meets admission requirements.

Law students who have completed the equivalent of 12 x 6 unit courses of their LLB or JD, may be eligible to enrol concurrently in the GDLP while completing their degree. Students must seek and receive permission from the Sub-Dean to concurrently enrol in the GDLP. Students start the GDLP with the Skills for Practice intensive which is offered 15 times a year (5 times in Canberra and 10 in other locations).

Students enrolled in the Legal Workshop can seek credit for qualifying legal practice placement. Examples include: qualifying summer clerkships, cadetships, internships, clinical programs and volunteer and paid work in legal practice. Where qualifying placement is undertaken before enrolling in the Legal Workshop, at least half of the placement may be counted.

Legal Aid Clinical Program (LAC Program)
The LAC Program is a clinical program provided by the ANU Legal Workshop in partnership with Legal Aid ACT. Students can choose to undertake this program as part of legal practice experience towards the GDLP. Students help provide free legal advice and short assistance to clients.

Student work is supervised by Legal Workshop teaching lawyers who work the program at Legal Aid. During the program most students also accompany Legal Aid solicitors working in the criminal duty list at the ACT Magistrates Court, the Legal Aid Domestic Violence Service, Family Court / Federal Magistrates Court and the Children's Court.

Regional, rural and remote CLC Placement

The RRR Community Legal Centres legal practice experience (PLE) initiative is provided by the National Association of Community Legal Centres in partnership with the Legal Workshop. The initiative highlights RRR legal careers against a backdrop of the severe shortage of lawyers in RRR Australia.

Legal Workshop GDLP students can apply to undertake RRR CLC placement and financial assistance may be available. Through this placement GDLP students can complete part or all of the GDLP LPE requirements.
