

Ready 4 Recognition

What is R4R?

Ready 4 Recognition is an educational project that provides the community with clear, concise and legally accurate information about the constitutional recognition of Indigenous peoples. Our team of ANU students and staff try to make understanding constitutional recognition easier through easy-to-read information packs, online engagement and in-person, interactive community legal education seminars (CLEs).

Phase 1

Phase 1, completed in August, 2015, involved producing plain English legal materials explaining the background and proposals for constitutional recognition. Check them out on our website: <http://ready4recognition.weblogs.anu.edu.au>.

Initiatives 2017

In 2017 R4R will continue to develop our educational video on treaty. The team will also be conducting CLEs and writing new online content for our blog. We are recruiting writers for our website and video project. Stay tuned for meeting dates!
